DISAGRERABLE As the weather of the past two or three days has been, by the people of Salt Lake. The higher temperature lengthens out the supply of coal, and gives the people those that before the next blast from the north comes, they will be better prepared to meet it than they were prepared to meet it than they were fort and warm winds from the south produce much ill-feeling in the breasts of mertals, but now we hear people on all sides expressing the earnest hope that this weather may continue for a week or longer, if the coal supply continues short. All of which is a foreible suggestion that cold warm. er and a scarcity of fuel combined, sarrounds herself. In his younger days Sir Alexander was reckless in his conduct, and the habits early arguired were pursued through life, its left a number of illegitimate children, two only of whom he acknowledged. To these he gave his name, and reared them in luxury. They are both respected and liked in fashionable society. One is an officer in the Life Guards, and the other, a daughter, is married to a relative of the Duke of Devonshire. Nothwithstanding Lord Cockburn's bad moral character, he was one of the ablest, most brilliant and faithful jurists that England has produced. No cane ever thought of questioning he honesty and integrity, and his opinions are held to be sound the world over.

rouse greater power. It has come to be that communities all over this country are more or less at the mercy of railroads, which can defy the people the same as they have so successfully done in California. There the people undertook to bring the roads into proper subjection, but failed miserably. The Central Pacific, with its branches and connections, is more powerful than the million of people in California, and can and does laugh at the squirming of the masses to obtain their rights. And so it's, in greater or less degree, all over the republic. Now and again, the railroad companies quarrel among themselves as they have lately been doing in the servers are few and far between. So long as the roads hold to their combinations, the public squeals in wain for release from the bondage placed upon them. Judge Black refers to a freight charge of $2.50 from New York to San Francisco, $4.00 being the rate from New York to Ealt Lake, and characterists is as "gross violation of legal principle." But will the gentleman say how to remedy it? Will be tell the people of Wyoming, of Idabo, of Utah, or of Newada, how they can prevent the railroad dicrimination that is daily robbing them? Many articles are now taken by water to San Francisco and brought overland to Sait Lake at a considerable saving to the shippers, and pretty nearly everything we get from the million of people in get from the proper say the
